PREFACE

Because poetry is of interest and read for reasons other than its subject matter, the classified arrangement used in A Southern Bibliography, numbers one and two, is not followed in this section. Instead, the purpose has been primarily to locate and list all southern poets who have had independent volumes published within the period 1929-1938, whatever the content of the poems. For that reason this can more properly be considered a finding list. An alphabetical arrangement is followed, listing poems under the names of the poets. For each entry an attempt has been made to give poet's full name, date of birth and state with which he is associated, complete title, place, publisher and date of the work, with main paging. Information about the author or the volume has been added in a note when considered of particular interest.

All poets are considered southern who were born in any one of the eleven states described by Howard W. Odum in Southern regions as most essentially southern—Virginia, North and South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Louisiana. Those poets also are included who were born outside these states but who have resided in this region over a period of years and thus have become identified with it. The many who have written about the south but who do not qualify as southerners under the limitations set are excluded. Thus, such generally accepted southern poets as Lizette Woodworth Reese (born and brought up in Maryland) and John Peale Bishop (born in West Virginia) and others are necessarily excluded. There are those, however, who though born in the region have lived the greater part of their lives outside of it, and these are distinguished by placing a b before the state of their birth. Sometimes a writer is closely identified with more than one southern state and in such cases the state of his birth is mentioned first.

A list of poets by states is included, and anthologies of poems written by southerners, these being grouped first by general anthologies and then by state.

PREFACE

Many volumes of poetry are printed privately or issued by small state presses, in which case it was not always possible to find full title and all bibliographical details.

That there may be many omissions is more than probable considering the fact that so much of this type of literature is privately printed and circulated. The Library School will be glad to receive information in regard to such omissions.

Grateful acknowledgment is made to the many libraries, publishers, and authors who have supplied information for this number of A Southern Bibliography.
